Few are so fortunately placed that the future holds no problems and since it is apparent that the majority of people receive moderate incomes, it is just as obvious that the majority can attain financial independence only by systematic saving.

After all, some sacrifice, some self-discipline is unavoidable if anything worth while is to be gained.

SIX WEEKS WITH SCIATICA

Could Not Sit Down—Even To Eat

Now Recommends Kruschen

Here is an extraordinary strong recommendation of a remedy for sciatica from one who has suffered the complaint in its most severe form. If you have ever felt the twinges of sciatica, you should certainly read it. If you know anyone who has sciatica, you should tell them about it.

The recommendation comes from Mr. T. P. H. He writes:—"I suffered from sciatica for about six weeks. At times I could not sit or lie down, but had to walk a little. I could not even sit down to eat. I was told by my neighbour to try Kruschen Salts, which I did, taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of water every morning. When I had taken one-and-a-half bottles the sciatica left me, and I have not felt it since. I owe a lot of thanks to Kruschen."

The pain of sciatica is a symptom of deeper trouble—the same trouble that causes rheumatism, gout and lumbago. They are a sign of an impure blood-stream. The salts in Kruschen have crept into the blood.

Kruschen is a blend of six natural salts, which ensure internal cleanliness and keep the blood-stream pure. The action of Kruschen is a continuous action. Each of its six salts supports the others in stimulating the bodily functions from a number of different angles. Thus the exact proportion of six salts is of supreme importance. That is why every bottle of Kruschen Salts is tested and standardised by a staff of qualified chemists, before it is passed for bottling.

The remarkable effectiveness of Kruschen in cases of sciatica, and similar complaints, has created a world-wide demand for it. It is taken by the people of 119 different countries. In none of those countries is there anything else quite like it—nothing else that gives the same results.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable of all Chemists and Stores at 2/9 per bottle.

Score Big Hit at Every Showing

Discovery at Waungoola

Barton's Follies, who scored such a big success on the occasion of their previous visit to Crookwell will repeat their former triumph on grounds situated at the rear of Kelly's Premier store, where the opening performance will be given, opening with the revue, "Gay Pares". The company has been considerably strengthened, and many additions have been made since the last visit, the combination being a very large one. Bright and snappy, without a moment's wait, the performance goes with a swing from start to finish. The show is rich in catchy numbers, dancing and music, while outstanding features are the elaborate dressing and lighting effects showing that infinite care has been taken in the production of the revue. Tibby Roberts makes a welcome reappearance while enthusiastic audiences have given rousing receptions to many clever newcomers. Among the many specialty acts are the Rev. Frank Gorman, the singing parson, the possessor of a beautiful voice of remarkably pure quality which he uses in finished style. He is also possessed of a flair for comedy, and presents a most unique and enjoyable offering. Miss Mahala Dodd, announced as the dancing violinist, presents one of the most entertaining and clever musical acts seen in any theatre. Her artistic playing on a violin of magnificent tone is a genuine treat. Sam Stern, a Hebrew comedian, is a good entertainer; a finished artist as well as an entertainer of high merit. Ray Gardner, the golden-voiced soprano, is another unusually clever artist. The ballet sketches in colour by Inky Williams reveal that this gentleman is a very clever artist as well as an entertainer of high merit. At last a pasture has been discovered that is proof against grasshopper attack. This interesting, though accidental, discovery was made recently by Messrs. F. C. Rowlands and Sons, of Werribee, Waungoola.

From the Bathurst experiment farm Messrs. Rowlands and Sons obtained a collection of five small packets of subterranean clover seed, which were planted in separate rows each 18 inches apart in a small plot near the homestead.

Within a week or so following germination swarms of grasshoppers descended upon the property and quickly ate large fodder paddocks and practically every vestige of green grass. Two paddocks, comprising 159 acres of Sudan grass, entirely disappeared within 12 hours.

An examination of the experimental plot of subterranean clover revealed the interesting fact that while two varieties of the clover (branded Mulwala and Springhurst) had been eaten out, and two other varieties (Bacchus Marsh and Midseason) had suffered severely, though not completely eaten out, the fifth row (an unidentified late variety) appeared to have been untouched.

During the two ensuing weeks in which the 'hoppers continued to infest the property, no attack was made on this row of clover, which alone had thrived vigorously.

Mr. L. J. Hearne said he had had the 'hoppers under observation for three weeks and had a sample for inspection. In a few weeks they would be twice the size they were at present.

Mr. Ashton asked if it were possible to locate the colonies of the 'hoppers, and Mr. Williams said where the colonies existed it was only necessary to cover the colony

Graziers' Meet at Binda

Discussion — 'Hoppers

At the meeting held in the School of Arts, Binda, on Thursday last, there was a full attendance present, the hall being well filled with graziers from the surrounding districts, all imbued with the one idea of combating the grasshopper menace.

The meeting was advertised to commence at 7.30 p.m., but before that hour there were many present who had commenced discussing among themselves the vital question, and punctually at the hour appointed the president (Mr. Armstrong) took the chair with about 70 present, all eager to give battle to the grasshopper.

The correspondence was left over until a future meeting, although a letter from Mr. J. H. Ashton, resigning from the executive of the Graziers' Association, for the area of Binda was accepted, Mr. Ashton giving as his reason that he was removing from the district.

The chairman eulogised the work that Mr. Ashton had fulfilled and said that he was sorry to lose Mr. Ashton, and that it was with regret that he had to accept the resignation.

The resignation of Mr. Williams as secretary of the association came as a shock to members, and on Mr. Williams being asked by the chairman to re-consider his decision, Mr. Williams stated that it was impossible for him to do so. He had done all he could for the association, and it gave him the greatest of pleasure, but at the same time, weighing the matter over carefully, he could not continue. He would suggest, however, that Mr. C. Levy be appointed in his stead. Mr. Levy was always approachable, and as he was constantly in Crookwell, members would have a better chance for interviewing him on any matter relative to the association. He would gladly assist Mr. Levy if such assistance were required.

Mr. J. Ashton supported, and Mr. Levy was duly appointed secretary.

THE COMMITTEE

The committee for the ensuing year were then appointed, viz., Messrs. J. Anderson, L. J. Hearne, G. Ashton, R. McKenzie, A. Branson, A. Collins, J. Carr, Janr., D. A. Hearne, G. King, W. Pageat, A. Seaman, P. Kenst, W. McIntosh, N. Carruthers, A. J. Oakes, H. Kelly, C. Webster, W. L. Lamrock, A. D. McIntosh.

It was moved by Mr. A. D. McIntosh and seconded by Mr. D. McIntosh, that the chairman be appointed as delegate to the annual conference, which was supported by Mr. Williams, and carried unanimously.

Mr. W. McIntosh moved that Mr. Williams be appointed to the general council of the Graziers' Association in lieu of Mr. J. H. Ashton (resigned).

Mr. Armstrong suggested that the meeting be adjourned for 14 days to get on with the 'hopper question, and on the motion of Mr. C. Webster, seconded by Mr. Hearne, the meeting was adjourned until the 24th instant.

Mr. Williams was the first speaker in regard to the 'hopper, and as he had had a long interview relative to the matter with members of the department, gave some valuable first-hand information. The 'hoppers had become a menace to the district, and they thrived on moisture, heat, feed. The 'hoppers, he said, were busy laying their eggs around the district, and if something drastic were not done at once, and concerted action taken, in a few weeks' time there would hardly be a blade of grass left. When the eggs were hatched, the 'hoppers cluster together, and as they do not come out together, if stringent means were adopted at once it would mean that the greater number would be killed. If owners were to get together at once a lot could be done to get rid of the pest, and it was the present time to commence operations. As we are getting a plentiful supply of rain it is generally found that it is followed by a dry spell, and at the present time the grass will grow in abundance and the eggs of the 'hoppers will germinate, and do great damage. A gentleman sent him a letter who had treated a large area, which had been very effective, but his neighbours, who had been dilatory, had received severe losses.

Suggestions had come from the department, such as laying of bait and spraying, and he believed that the best time for such as spraying was in the early hours of the morning, or late in the evening. Spraying an area to about 30 feet, preventing the 'hopper from escaping. The material required is sent by the department free of charge, and being on the boundaries of Goulburn, Yass and Carcoar P.P. districts it would be advisable to form a depot in this area.

Mr. L. J. Hearne said he had had the 'hoppers under observation for three weeks and had a sample for inspection. In a few weeks they would be twice the size they were at present.

Mr. Ashton asked if it were possible to locate the colonies of the 'hoppers, and Mr. Williams said where the colonies existed it was only necessary to cover the colony

TEN AT THE TOP IN TENNIS

A Prominent American Sports Writer's Views

ON WORLD'S TENNIS RANKING

Strange to relate, in this day and age of systems and bureaucracy, there is in existence no international lawn-tennis ranking committee. Yet there are national ranking committees in all major countries, and then, too, there is the International Lawn Tennis Federation. It is true that various lists of world ratings are published at the end of each playing season, but, for the most part, these are not based on any deep study, or painstaking analysis, of actual tournament results. They are all guided too frequently by opinions and impressions of a player's inherent ability.—This writes J. Brooks Fenno, Junr., in a recent issue of the "Literary Digest" (N.Y.) during the course of an interesting article, in which he sums up the merits of the world's first ten tennis players for 1934:

1. Frederick J. Perry, Great Britain.
2. Gottfried von Cramm, Germany.
3. John H. Crawford, Australia.
4. Henry W. Austin, Great Britain.
5. Wilmer L. Allison, Jr., United States.
6. Giorgio de Stefani, Italy.
7. Roderick Menzel, Czechoslovakia.
8. Sidney W. Wood, Jr., United States.
9. Vernon G. Kirby, South Africa.
10. Frank X. Shields, United States.

Continuing, he says: "Tennis is a sport where the competition is individual, and where therefore, relative merits, to a large extent, can be measured properly. The Davis Cup matches serve to bring together annually the leading nations scattered widely throughout the world.

This, then, is an attempt to offer a world's first ten ranking list, based on a disinterested and comprehensive study of tennis results in international and national competition in all countries where the game is fostered. As a logical foundation upon which to build, only matches which are the best of five sets have been taken into consideration, while tournament results from more than a dozen countries have been tabulated and analysed carefully.

Perry Tops the Ten

Naturally overwhelming emphasis is placed on Davis Cup matches, and on national championships, as distinguished from local events, except where additional comparative data is found necessary. In addition to Davis Cup play, the major tennis events of the year were the English (Wimbledon) Championship, the French (World's Hard Court) Championship, the Australian Championship, the British Hard Court Championship and the United States National Singles—but there are many other national events to be considered, even as far afield as Czechoslovakia, Egypt, and Japan.

Heading the list of the world's outstanding amateur players is Frederick John Perry, debonair and colorful Britisher. Winner this year of the Australian, English, and American singles championships, and mainstay of England's victorious Davis Cup team, he takes a place among the greatest stars of recent years. In addition to forceful ground strokes, unflinching steadiness, a twist-service, and remarkable court-covering ability, Perry has match-play temperament to the nth degree. He never is more dangerous than in a fifth set. He also has that innate sense of doing the right thing at the right time. All of which goes to make him a very worthy champion.

Following in the swath cut by Perry's racket—though at some distance—is the German internationalist, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, who earns the No. 2 position over Jack Crawford, of Australia. Baron von Cramm won the only major singles title that eluded Perry's grasp when he vanquished a field of the outstanding players of Europe and Australia in the French championship. He eliminated the Czechoslovakian, Menzel, in the quarter-finals, the Italian ace, de Stefani, in the semi-finals, and Crawford in a titanic five-set final. With a powerful serve, and with sweeping and beautifully executed drives, the handsome stalwart German stands as one of the most improved players of the last two years. In the French and German Davis Cup contest he nearly proved France's undoing. Baron von Cramm must be considered, to-day, the greatest threat to Perry's world supremacy for 1935.

Pressing closely on Baron von Cramm's heels for a place in the tennis sun is Jack Crawford, runner-up in four of the five major national tournaments of the year. Perry proved his nemesis, and won decisively in all their meetings. In the Davis Cup final, the Australian defeated Frank Shields in the opening day of play only to lose, subsequently, to Sidney Wood in a five-set battle. Defeats by Menzel and Merclin in Davis Cup competition marred an otherwise impressive record. Crawford has a well-rounded and polished game, chiefly back-court, but effective at the net when he chooses

"THE FLYING DOCTOR"

Among the recent additions to the Literary Institute's library is an Australian publication by Robert Waldron, "The Flying Doctor."

This book is a romantic story of the aerial medical service, and should appeal to all who like romance set in our own times.

The story opens in Sydney and after a series of misfortunes, the hero, a young doctor, joins the aerial medical service. The background of the story then changes to the outback where—but why not join the School of Arts and read it for yourself. It would be well worth it!

In the preface, which is written by Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith you will read these words, "With a feeling of sympathy I followed with the doctor in his battle with the storm and I was able to appreciate to the full the strain and anxiety Mr. Waldron has so well portrayed.—It was sheer bad luck he did not have a flying landing."

"The Flying Doctor" is a story that has my highest approval," continues Kingsford-Smith, "so admirably does it combine truth and fiction."

to advance into the fore-court. His weakness is his service, which lacks string, heavily built, he is inclined to tire in a prolonged contest. Yet his sense of anticipation is remarkably keen, and this, in itself, saves him much effort.

Henry (Bunny) Austin, No. 3 player, stood as a hulked last summer in England's successful defence of the Davis Cup. In the Challenge Round, he won from Sidney Wood in four sets, having annihilated Frank Shields in his first match with the loss of only nine games, thereby gaining ample revenge for a five-set defeat by the latter at Wimbledon. In France, he lost to Christian Bouscain, but if one wishes further comparative data, one has only to turn back the pages to the Riviera season where straight-set triumphs over Stefan and Menzel gave him added laurels. Austin is comparable to Lacoste in his steadiness and accuracy, and in the rhythmic execution of his ground-strokes. He is frail physically, and because of this fact, fares better in a short competition like the Davis Cup than in the longer tournament grind.

Allison Leads for America

Wilmer Allison follows Austin in the rating. His only participation in a national singles championship was at Forest Hills. He did not compete abroad, and he was not chosen for the Davis Cup team. There would be ground for excluding him from a world's ranking because of insufficient playing data if his record of achievement had not been so outstanding. His triumph at Newport in a field including America's leading players, and his victories over Stofen and Wood at Forest Hills should give him a strong claim for No. 1 position on the American ranking list, while his superb five-set battle against Perry in the final of America's national singles fully justifies his world's ranking. When his hard-hitting strokes are in control, Wilmer Allison has a game which compares with the best that there is in lawn-tennis.

Giorgio de Stefani is the ambidextrous Italian who plays with both hands (though only one racket!), shifting his racket from one side to the other as the occasion warrants. His long suit is steadiness in the back-court, and his most formidable tennis is on clay. He was the only player to defeat Perry during the 1934 season—in the French championship at Auteuil—but there is a string attached to the victory, inasmuch as the Englishman injured his ankle in the fourth set, yet played bravely on, only to faint at the conclusion of the match. Nevertheless, it should be recorded that the Italian was ahead two sets to one when the accident occurred. In the Davis Cup matches Stefan distinguished himself by defeating Menzel in five sets, although all in a hopeless cause, for Italy was doomed to defeat by Czechoslovakia from the start.

As with Stefan, turf-play is not Roderick Menzel's forte. His booming serve and topped drives are better adapted to a firmer surface, and this partly explains his downfall at Forest Hills. It might be added that Menzel's awkward backhand is a weakness on any kind of service. Whether he should be ranked ahead of Sidney Wood is open to argument. Wood defeated Menzel's conqueror, Frank Parker, at Forest Hills, thereby offsetting the Czechoslovakian's victory over Vivian McGrath. Wood, conqueror in a Davis Cup contest, both defeated Crawford, both lost to Perry in five-set matches, but Menzel's win over Baron von Cramm in the former's native country, plus a second victory over McGrath, seem to rate as a shade more important than Wood's triumph over Kirby at Wimbledon, good as that was.

Wood and Shields Erratic

It was not an easy task to place the last two players—Menzel, Wood, Kirby, and Shields—in their proper sequence. Menzel appeared to have a slight edge over the others. Since Wood defeated Kirby at Wimbledon, Kirby won from Shields in the United States, that order finally prevailed. There is, in reality, little to choose between Wood and Shields. The former won from Crawford in Davis Cup competition, whereas he lost to the second Australian McGrath, while Shields reversed the process by defeating McGrath and losing to Crawford. It may be said truthfully that the tennis exhibited by both these Americans during the season ranged from thoroughly mediocre to highly scintillating.

Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, No. 9 on the list, has had a meteoric rise this season, with victories to his credit over McGrath and Baron von Cramm, as well as over Shields in the American national championship. Kirby, a left-hander and slight of build, has an all-round game with methodical and nicely-angled ground-strokes which lack only speed. He is quick to pick openings, and uses his head as well as his feet.

From "Life" Magazine, 15/12/34.

JACK CRAWFORD REGAINS AUSTRALIAN TITLE

At Melbourne on Saturday last Jack Crawford regained his Australian title beating Fred Perry (Eng.), 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4. There were 12,000 spectators present, and at every point of the game both champions were heartily cheered. It was evident that the nervousness displayed in the first set by Crawford was matches Stefan distinguished him quickly dispelled.
